Macquarie's human society research is of an international calibre. In the Excellence in Research for Australia (ERA) 2012 evaluation our research in the disciplines of anthropology, political science, sociology and studies in human society received a rating of ‘performance at world standard’.

Macquarie has a long record of important contributions in social theory, research methodology and applied social science. Our research addresses key elements of social science theory and important issues of policy and practice, with disciplinary strengths in anthropology, political economy, political science and sociology. Researchers within these core disciplines also enjoy strong interdisciplinary collaboration with researchers in cultural studies, environmental studies, historical studies, philosophy, social policy and urban studies.

These partnerships make significant contributions to national disciplinary research, and interdisciplinary areas such as aging, climate change, governance and development, health care, HIV/AIDS in South-East Asia, Indigenous studies, international relations, multiculturalism, social inclusion, volunteering and women's studies.

Our researchers, who include Fellows of the Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia and several Australian Institute of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Studies Fellows, are critical, constructive and socially engaged, making key ideas and analyses accessible to a wide range of end-users including community and public sector groups, governments, industry and students.

As an HDR candidate you will benefit from the extensive expertise of our internationally respected researchers.
Highlights

• Our researchers are prolific authors, regularly publishing in high-profile local and international journals including Ageing and Society; Australian Journal of Anthropology; Australian Journal of Political Science; Australian Journal of Social Issues; Cultural Anthropology; Current Sociology; European Journal of Social Theory; Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies; Journal of Sociology; Sociological Research Online; Sociological Theory; Thesis Eleven; and Work, Employment and Society

• We have valuable collaborations with the Australian Housing and Urban Research Institute, Australian Human Rights Commission, Australian Red Cross, Centre for Policy Development, Community Relations Commission, Department of Employment and Workplace Relations, Department of Immigration and Citizenship, NSW Health and local government authorities, as well as with international institutions such as Asian Development Bank, Bristol University, Ibis Reproductive Health and Stockholm Environment Institute

Support

We give HDR candidates strong academic and administrative support. This includes:

• Commencement and completion programs
• Discipline-specific research training units, including workshops in research communication, presentation skills, academic writing skills, thesis planning and poster preparation
• Experienced supervisors and department-based higher degree research directors
• Financial support for eligible candidates for a range of research-related activity
• Regular progress reports and interviews, and/or work-in-progress presentations in which research candidates receive feedback on their work from a panel of academics in their field

Research leaders

Macquarie is home to many internationally renowned researchers, including:

Professor Marion Maddox is the leading authority on the intersection of religion and politics in Australia. As the 1999–2000 Australian Parliamentary Fellow she interviewed some 50 serving and retired federal members and senators about their views on faith and public life which resulted in For God and Country: Religious dynamics in Australian federal politics. Her landmark work, God under Howard: The rise of the religious right in Australian politics, was published in 2005. She is currently researching religion-state relations.

Associate Professor Chris Lyttleton is working at the front line of HIV education in Laos. His research is informing education programs targeted toward one of the country’s ethnic minorities, the Akha. Recent results are demonstrating considerable success; many of the Akha have become more aware of STIs and are seeking treatment and new cases appear to be dropping. Other research interests include cultural identity; male sexuality in Laos; and mobility and social change in border areas of Thailand, Laos and China.

The information in this document is correct as at the date of publication but the University reserves the right to vary or withdraw any general information, any program(s) and/or fees without notice.